

ABSTRACT

One aspect of the invention provides a novel scheme to prevent multiple processing of the same system events of an Intelligent Platform Management Interface by providing a mechanism to determine the last processed event ID. Another aspect of the invention provides a mechanism to synchronize access to the system event log by granting one of one or more system management applications exclusive access to the system event log thereby preventing other system management applications from processing the same event more than once.